DR SUTCLIFFE'S [c] TREATISE OF ECCLESIASTICAL DISCIPLINE *

Dr Matthew Sutchffe dedicateth to the Earl of Bath his Treatise of Ecclesiastical Discipline, which is sent to the press, wherein is confuted article by article the doctrine and practice of those who attack the Church of England, either preferring the Presbytenal Government or disliking the disorders of the Church Of these, some have consumed their own goods and devoured the late lands of Abbeys and are now so eager that they would digest not only tithes but also glebe and parish churches

Others are moved by violent ambition, that although they talk much of equality, yet hope to be chosen presidents of the consistory, willing to hazard all and have a part in the government, for they disdain to be governed by others Added thereunto are the stirring minds of men malcontent who however they fare always deem their present condition most burdensome, and so that they may see an innovation and change care not whether church or commonwealth be changed
